Lowlands vs Highlands

There are only three operating distilleries remaining in the Lowlands, located at the southern-most part of the low-laid Scottish region. The product is generally considered as the lightest bodied Scotch with fresh, floral and cereal aromas.

The Highland's is the largest of the Whiskey producing regions in Scotland producing more full bodied Whiskies with deeper notes of peat and smoke. Due to the variety of the region Highland Whiskies often have a higher diversity in tastes. The northern areas having a spicy character and the southern have a more fruiter style.

Speyside vs Islay & Skye

Speyside boasts the greatest concentration of distilleries in the world and thus is a 'must see' for all whisky lovers. Although the Speyside region is geographically part of the highlands, it is considered a separate region because of its unique characteristics. Speyside scotch is the country's most complex, and is known for its sweetness, elegant flavours and aromas.

The malts found in these two islands are unmistakably powerful; with smoky, peaty aromas and floral tones complemented by maritime and peppery complexity.
